A short bank holiday week caused a few challenges with a couple of sites having some reliability issues but everything was cleared up on the week. A variable weather weekend irritated the last of the holiday makers as well as the farmers trying to tidy up the harvest but this did little to affect the pig price with the SPP creeping up a further 0.24p/kg. Most buyers were wanting their numbers some wanting more with one wanting less. Sow price dropped 2p/kg.

With most English schools returning this week, Scottish schools having already gone back it will be back to normality for most and with a distinctly more autumnal feel there will not be too many more outings for the BBQ, while processors will be turning their attention to the end of the year. Concerns still remain with the European price being significantly below ours although Germany was reported to have stood on France, Ireland and Spain experienced a deterioration of their price. Another stark fact from the DEFRA June census, that the Tribune leads with, is that the English pig herd is at an all time low falling 1% to 326,000 head!
